With more than 25 years of experience in the health care industry, Thomas J. Babbo provides advice and counsel to physician groups, hospitals, and health systems. Recognized by Chambers USA as having “a fine track record acting for healthcare professionals on matters related to alignment and integration,” and for “providing thoughtful, nuanced responses to complicated health law issues,” Mr. Babbo focuses his practice in the development of value-based care models, physician/hospital collaborations, population health, and managed care arrangements - including the development of over 200 clinical integration networks (CINs), accountable care organizations (ACOs), and management services organizations (MSOs) across more than 30 states.

Before joining the Health Care Practice at HMBR, Mr. Babbo was assistant general counsel for Advocate Health Care and served as the legal counsel and corporate secretary for Advocate’s CIN, Advocate Physician Partners. While at Advocate, Mr. Babbo provided legal services in such areas as managed care contracting, antitrust and clinical integration, information systems and telecommunications, medical education and clinical research, and hospital and physician practice operations. Prior to his time at Advocate, Mr. Babbo served as Assistant General Counsel for Rush University Medical Center in Chicago.

Mr. Babbo is a member of the American Health Lawyers Association, and has taught at the Loyola University Chicago School of Law (Adjunct Professor), Rush University’s Health Systems Management Program (Assistant Professor), and Dominican University’s School of Business Administration (Adjunct Professor).
